

How to Order Bronze Plaques for National Register Properties

The Historic Preservation Division encourages owners of historic properties to display National Register plaques as a means of recognizing and promoting the National Register program and designation, but plaques are neither a requirement of the National Park Service or the Historic Preservation Division, nor are they supplied by either office. While the Historic Preservation Division and the Georgia Department of Community Affairs do not endorse any manufacturer of plaques, our office provides the following names and addresses of foundries as a public service. These companies are known as experienced producers of National Register plaques:

Healy Plaques
P.O. Box 4
Manville, Rhode Island 02838
