Creating a Successful Regional Plan

The development of a Meaningful Regional Plan begins with the insightful input of a community's citizens, government officials, and staff addressing the issues of today, the opportunities of tomorrow, and the steps necessary to effectuate positive change over the next twenty (20) years. The River Valley Regional Commission's Community Participation Plan is designed to encourage as much public participation, open dialogue and communication as possible in order to achieve a Regional Plan consensus that translates into better government decisions and greater community agreement with those decisions.

The major challenge in developing a successful plan for the River Valley Region is convincing its citizens that the Regional Plan belongs to each and every citizen of the River Valley Region, and that broad based public participation is necessary to obtain citizen ownership of the plan. It is also necessary to educate plan participants that the plan should represent a balance of community interest, defined by a give-and-take process that seeks local opinion and knowledge on planning issues. The end result is a community consensus (a Vision) in regards to future development policies and practices. Successful communities first create a vision, then agree upon a course of action to achieve the vision, and finally take the steps necessary to implement the vision.

Stakeholders

Identification of the River Valley Regional Stakeholders

An essential element in implementing a Regional Plan is to recognize other organizations and interested parties that could not only provide support, but could provide leadership in the execution of some of the programs outlined in the plan. These interested groups, or stakeholders, have a vested interest in the successful growth and development of the River Valley Region, and are therefore an integral part of the community planning process. The Community Participation Program should include tools to identify and engage representatives who have a present or future stake in the community. Key stakeholders include the community residents representing a diverse range of backgrounds and interests, specifically those that have been historically left out of the decision making process, such as members of low-income communities, immigrant communities, and ethnic and minority groups, as well as business and industry leaders, civic leaders, the development community, real estate professionals, media representatives, city and county staff, and elected officials. Other key stakeholders include agriculture and forestry interests, banks, religious institutions and leaders, civic clubs, students, tourism officials, service organizations, and military leaders and members of the military with vested interest in the community. Local groups, property owners, and local business owners have also been identified as key stakeholders.

Importance of Stakeholder Participation

Stakeholders are vital to the process, because they not only create change, but are also affected by it. Participation of these groups can help foster community understanding and support for the Regional Plan document, and provide fuel for the implementation of the plan. Since the list can grow and more organizations and interested parties identified throughout the process there will be names and interested parties not included in this list. In order to ensure that all interested parties have a voice in the process, local government officials will be utilized to encourage participation and guide the planning process.

Stakeholders (by County)

Below is a listing of individuals, agencies, and other organizations that will be engaged in the development of the Regional Agenda for the River Valley Region. The list highlights key constituents that play a vital part in the development of projects within the region.

Participation Techniques

Participation Techniques are an essential component in developing community plans. The Community Participation Plan of the Regional Plan describes the techniques that will be utilized to obtain feedback from specific stakeholder groups, as well as from local residents and citizens of the region.

Large group meetings, similar to the one pictured above, will be used in the Visioning portion of the plan development, to gain a broader cross-section of opinions and input.

In addition, smaller scale meetings will be held with advisory boards and specific stakeholder groups to refine the plan.

Informational Techniques

This type of participation technique is designed to inform the citizens of the River Valley region of the purpose and goals of the Regional Plan. By informing local residents of the importance of planning for the region's future, we will be able to encourage participation and involvement from stakeholders in the development of this important plan. The proposed informational techniques will be designed to be electronic, interactive, easily accessible and visually appealing to the region's citizens.

Citizen Notification

The River Valley Regional Commission will employ a variety of notification techniques to encourage citizen involvement in the regional planning process. Local governments, civic leaders and groups, religious organizations, local businesses, and community service organizations will be contacted to assist in notifying citizens regarding upcoming involvement opportunities. Press releases, posters and announcements at public meetings will also be used to notify the public about upcoming meetings and to generate public interest. Public Service Announcements (PSA) will also be broadcast through the major radio network include Clear Channel Radio which includes a wide variety of stations and reaches out to a wide spectrum of demographic groups within the region. PSA's will also run in the region's television networks including the Columbus Consolidated Government Television station. Citizen notifications will also be posted on the River Valley Regional Plan's Facebook group and website.

Media Announcements

The River Valley Regional Commission will also utilize various social networking and online media to update citizens and local governments regarding the progress of the Regional Plan's development. E-mail blasts, which will include and electronic newsletter, will be send periodically as the Regional Plan evolves. Upcoming meetings, announcements, and requests for comments and assistance will be made through the River Valley website and Facebook page. Citizens will also have the option to join the River Valley Regional Plan Facebook group to gain access to weekly updates and project photos, and will also provide citizens with direct line of open communication with the RVRC planning staff through the Facebook group. The Regional Plan's website will also be updated weekly and will automatically sync with our Facebook group, thus providing consistent and current information to those living within the River Valley Region (www.rivervalleyrc.org/regionalplan.htm).

Interactive Techniques

This type of participation technique is intended to gain citizen input on the different issues and opportunities that the River Valley region will face in the upcoming years. These meetings are also intended to gather input on the desired vision for the future growth and development of the region as a whole.

Visual Preference Surveys

A visual preference survey is a technique for obtaining public feedback on physical design alternatives. It is often used when designing zoning codes, planning redevelopment, and conducting urban planning research. The survey consists of a series of images that participants must score according to their preference. The images may be actual photographs or computer-simulated images depicting potential urban environments. The participants' input is then used to make decisions about the future built environment.

Strengths

- Visually preference surveys are a generally simple and inexpensive tool to use, requiring little prep time and few resources.
- Visual Preference Surveys can be an engaging way to discern the growth objectives and goals of a community.
- Visual Preference Surveys can be adapted to a variety of different media, including paper, with a set of photographs mailed to citizens; electronic, built into an online survey, or conducted during a public meeting.

Drawbacks

A visual preference survey is only as strong as the set of images that it utilizes, and the results of the survey are only representative of those that participate.

Regional Open House

To ensure that all of the residents within the River Valley region have an opportunity to provide input and participate in the planning process of the Regional Plan, a series of official public hearings will be held throughout the River Valley Region. A series of four open houses will be held throughout the region, in Taylor County, the City of Columbus, Clay County, and the City of Americus. These meetings are open to the public, and all residents of the region will be encouraged to attend to see the progress of the Regional Plan, as well as to offer their feedback and opinion. The exact dates and locations of these meetings will be advertised to the public in the necessary legal organs, as well as advertised on the River Valley website and Facebook pages.

Vision Meetings

The goal of the vision meetings will be to review the general Vision Statement created for the Regional Plan. The primary goal of the vision meeting will be to survey participants about the River Valley Region's current issues and opportunities and to discuss how citizens would like to see the River Valley region grow in the future. In order to achieve the above goals, an S.W.O.T. (Strength, Weaknesses, Opportunities, and Threats) Analysis will be conducted, Issues and Opportunities for the planning period will be discussed, and quality of life issues will be reviewed. These are all major steps necessary to achieve the desired results discussed during the meetings, as well as to establish measures that can be taken to quantify future success within the River Valley Region.

Partnership Techniques

This type of participation technique is designed to gain more specific feedback from targeted stakeholder groups within the region.

Regional Steering Committee

Composed of members of the executive committees of the River Valley Regional Commission Council, this Regional Steering Committee will aid RVRC staff in the formulation of the Regional Plan. This committee will provide feedback, advise the planning team, and shape the overall planning process. The first Steering Committee Meeting will be held on September 20, 2011 at the RVRC office in Columbus. Following this meeting, the Steering Committee Members will meet on a monthly basis with RVRC Staff, prior to board meetings, to discuss progress and development of the regional plan, as well as addressing lingering questions and concerns. Steering Committee members will be asked to attend Stakeholder Meetings in order to ensure adequate representation of both the RVRC Council and regional stakeholders.
