Suggested Development Patterns

Community development patterns are the way that the location and bulk of buildings, intensity of use, streets, parking, open space and public facilities look and work together. These suggested development patterns can create safe, walkable, economically-sustainable communities. Apply these development patterns to your community's character areas to create or maintain the character of your community.

Additional resources to assist you in establishing development patterns include: the State Planning Recommendations Bibliography; DCA's guidebooks, Discovering and Planning for Community Character, and Character Areas: Techniques and Guidance.

Addition of neighborhood commercial centers on appropriate infill sites to serve surrounding neighborhood.	Suburban Developing Suburban Built Out Declining Neighborhood Neighborhood Redevelopment Neighborhood Center Light Industrial
Homes, shops, small businesses, and institutions grouped together in villages or attractive mixed use centers that serve adjacent neighborhoods. Centers are very pedestrian friendly, and include pleasant community gathering spaces. Residences bring round-the-clock activity to the area.	Neighborhood Center Town Center Regional Activity Center
Buildings in centers architecturally integrated with the site and one another, and developed at a scale sufficient in size, bulk and height to provide image identification for the center and the surrounding community. Nodal or village developments with buildings clustered at center, clearly defined edge surrounded by open space.	Rural Village
Traditional downtown areas maintained as the focal point of the community. These community focal points should be attractive, mixed-use, pedestrian-friendly places where people choose to gather for shopping, dining, socializing, and entertainment.	Downtown
