

BARN TYPES IN GEORGIA

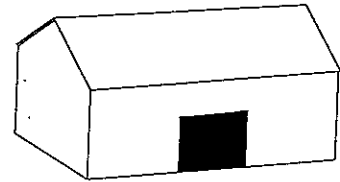

Single Crib

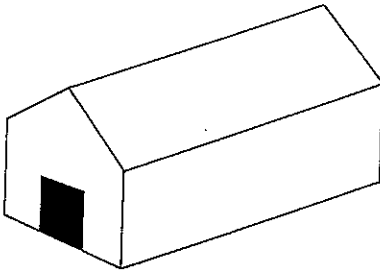

Similar to the single pen house type, the single-crib barn has a single usable space. One of the most common barns in Georgia, this type is typically gable-fronted with a single door in the end. Side wings or lean-tos are common in all barns, and they do not affect the type of barn.

Double crib barns have two enclosed interior spaces, or cribs, divided by a central runway or passageway. The roof is usually side-gabled, but it can also be front-gabled.

Double Crib

Transverse Crib

This is possibly the most common barn type in Georgia. Unlike the double-crib barn, it is front-gabled, and it has three or more cribs on either side of the central passageway.
